Abstract of Disclosure

[0033] A communication method and system are provided which enables the communication of data and television signals on a residential gateway network while avoiding the degradation of VDSL signals. This invention employs a new directional coupler that permits coupling between input and output ports, but only limited coupling to a television port.